Domestic Dispute Near Lima Leads To Drug Bust And Officers Treated For Exposure

Jeremy Crawford, Southwestern Montana News

A domestic dispute reported on the side of the road near Lima escalated into a significant drug-related incident on Monday morning. Responding officers from various agencies, including a Motor Carrier Services Officer, a Bureau of Land Management Law Officer, a Beaverhead County Sheriff's Deputy, and a Dillon Police Officer, quickly team up to regain control of the situation.

The incident led to the arrest of a Billings woman who was wanted on drug-related charges and was suspected of trafficking fentanyl. A male companion, also from Billings and with a history of drug offenses, was placed under a 72-hour hold.

During the confrontation, a variety of drug paraphernalia and fentanyl were seized from the woman, along with items that had been discarded from the vehicle during the dispute. Law Enforcement Officers took precautions when handling the items and wore protective gloves.

Following the seizure, the Deputy and Police Officer who handled the drug-related items reported experiencing symptoms such as overheating, headaches, and respiratory issues. The Officer responsible for transporting the seized items noted having teary eyes, an increased heart rate, and severe coughing. Due to the potential risk associated with the exposure, the Officer had Narcan readily available for use.

Both officers subsequently sought medical attention at the emergency room, where one officer was administered medication to help lower their heart rate due to exposure to chemicals.

In a concerning turn of events, a Detention Officer who had come into contact with the woman's clothing also required transport to the ER for feeling unwell. This officer was assisted by an off-duty Detention Officer who was also evaluated for possible exposure.

All officers involved were later released from the hospital and are reported to be in good health.

As the investigation continues, both suspects are expected to face charges of criminal endangerment, along with multiple drug-related charges. Law enforcement is reminding the public of the dangers posed by fentanyl and the importance of taking precautions when handling suspected drug-related items.

by volunteering for the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife in 1999. In 2001, he began a career with the U.S. Forest Service as a fisheries technician with the Willamette National Forest.

Over the next decade, Corey held multiple fishery management positions with the Willamette and White River National Forests. While working for the White River, he also detailed into the Deputy District Ranger for the Aspen-Sopris Ranger District. During his career, Corey has been engaged in a variety of fire suppression and planning roles, including working on the fire line and as an Agency Administrator.

In 2014, Corey and his family moved to Montana where he served as the District Ranger for the Townsend Ranger District with the Helena-Lewis and Clark National Forest. For the past seven years, Corey has served as the Bozeman District Ranger with the Custer Gallatin National Forest, where he recently finished a detail as the acting Deputy Forest Supervisor.

"I'm eager to start working on important issues and opportunities across the Beaverhead-Deerlodge National Forest and engaging with the communities that surround it," said Lewellen. "As a family, we're excited and looking forward to becoming part of the Dillon community."

Corey grew up in Springfield, Oregon, in the southern part of the Willamette Valley. When not busy with school and sports he spent most of his childhood hunting, camping, and fishing with his family in the Cascade Mountains.

He attended Montana State University in Bozeman before transferring to Oregon State University where he earned a B.S. in Fish and Wildlife.

Corey and his wife Emily coming to Dillon from Three Forks, where they spend most of their time chasing their four boys in sports, 4H, or FFA. They also enjoy spending as much time outdoors as possible.

Bulldogs Fall in Season Opener to Dickinson State

The Montana Western women's basketball team (0-1, 0-0) fell in their season opener this evening against the Dickinson State Blue Hawks (2-0, 0-0) by a final score of 70-61.

Today's loss marks the first loss to the Blue Hawks since the 2014-15 season.

How It Happened: The Bulldogs got on the board early in the game, taking a seven-point lead behind a triple from Ava Bellach in the first four minutes of the first quarter. Joelnell Momberg drained the Bulldogs' third triple to cap the quarter and take an 18-14 lead into the second frame.

Despite the promising start, Western hit a lull as the Blue Hawks went on a 10-1 run across the first three minutes of the second quarter. DSU would extend their lead and hold Western to just 12 points in the frame and take a 37-30 lead into the half break.

DSU continued their run into the third, pushing out to an 11-point lead with five minutes to go in the third. It was Momberg once again who got Western's offense back rolling, hitting a pair of free throws to break the spell.

Isabella Lund followed, hitting on back-to-back trips to the hoop and Maddy Moy added another layup to cut the lead back to five. Dickinson would retain the edge at 53-48 heading into the final ten minutes of the game.

UMW's less than ideal fourth quarter led to the Blue Hawks outscoring the Bulldogs 17-13 in the final stretch and win by a final score of 70-61.

Notables

- The Bulldogs are now 9-1 in their last ten matchups with Dickinson State and prior to tonight, had not lost to DSU since 2014.
- Western will get another shot at the Blue Hawks on Nov. 8 in UMW's home opener.
- Momberg led the Bulldogs with 18 points and four rebounds.
- Trinidie Nichols racked up four steals and four rebounds in the matchup.

Up Next: Montana Western will head to the University of Montana on Friday Nov. 1 for an exhibition matchup with the Griz. Tip-off is set for 7 p.m. in Dahlberg Arena.

Local Campaign Ad Raises Questions Among Montana Sheriffs

Jeremy Crawford, Southwestern Montana News

A full-page campaign ad featuring Senator Jon Tester, asserting his support for law enforcement and commitment to border security, has garnered attention from sheriff departments statewide. The ad, circulated in local newspapers, notably in Beaverhead County, claims that Tester has secured millions in funding for local sheriff offices, stirring skepticism among law enforcement officials.

The advertisement specifically cites that Tester has allocated $1,121,064 for Beaverhead County law enforcement. However, Sheriff Dave Wendt has publicly questioned when his department will receive these funds, casting doubt on the ad's claims.

"As we face increasing demands for public safety, transparency regarding funding is crucial," Wendt stated. This election cycle, loaded with contentious political ads, is particularly significant for the sheriff's office, which is seeking voter approval for a levy to support its budget.

The ad was financed by Montanans for Tester and follows a series of controversial political statements made in various campaign advertisements. Earlier this month, Barrett Hospital issued a statement to clarify claims from another ad suggesting rural hospitals would close if Tester is not reelected.

Wendt emphasized that the Beaverhead County Sheriff's Office does not endorse any candidates and expressed concern over how such ads could adversely affect local law enforcement's efforts to secure necessary funding. "These ads hurt us in the long run when we approach the community for additional support," he added.

Sheriff Wendt is not alone in his concerns. Sheriff Rauser of Broadwater County responded with a detailed statement addressing the funding his department has received, clarifying the sources and application process for those funds. Additionally, the Sheriff of Roosevelt County has taken to social media, soliciting information about the alleged funds mentioned in the ad.

A quick search reveals that numerous sheriffs across the state share similar inquiries, highlighting a growing unease with political ads that seemingly misrepresent support for law enforcement.

As the election intensifies, voters are reminded that many campaign ads are designed to enhance a candidate's image while undermining opponents. Local residents are encouraged to directly contact institutions mentioned in political advertising to verify claims, ensuring that information is accurate and not misleadingly portrayed for electoral gain.

In a landscape filled with political rhetoric, the imperative for clarity and accountability resonates louder than ever within Montana's law enforcement community.

Smith Earns Second Frontier Conference Player of the Week Nod This Season

After an impressive week that saw the no. 17 ranked Montana Western women's volleyball team go 2-0 in a pair of five-set matches, senior Jazi Smith was named the ERCK Hotels Frontier Conference Attacker of the Week.

Smith led the 17th ranked Bulldogs to a 2-0 record after racking up 44 kills on a .350 hitting percentage. She averaged 4.4 kills per set for the week and also added five blocks, two service aces and three assists.

Smith became the first UMW in the rally scoring ear to top 1,000 career kills in a career after their 3-2 victory versus Rocky Mountain.

This is Smith's second career Erck Hotels / Frontier Conference Player of the Week award and UMW's fifth player of the week honor this season.
