Dave Delisi book signing at The Bookstore

Author Dave Delisi will be signing copies of his beautiful coffee table/essay book, A Year on the Ruby at the bookstore on Saturday, June 14th from 1:00-3:00. With a reading from the book starting at 1:30. He will be reading an entry from each of the four seasons. Dave is the Outreach Coordinator at Ruby Habitat Foundation's Woodson Ranch near Alder, MT, managing access for educational and recreational purposes.

While in this role, he began observing and then documenting seasonal events on the ranch, from the return of sandhill cranes in March to their departure in September, from icy river banks to hopper season for fly fisher-folk, and a myriad of other cyclical happenings that are common where water, wildlife, and agriculture intersect. Each week since 2017, he has published a short photo-essay of the previous week's observations. This book is collection of one year's worth of those publications.

The author donates 100% of his proceeds to benefit Ruby Habitat Foundaton, a small, non-profit ranch located near Alder, Montana, dedicated to balancing wildlife and agriculture, while providing managed public access for recreational purposes. One reader had this say about the book: "The picture selection is outstanding and I appreciate the index to who's who in the pictures in the back of the book...;As is true from your bi-weekly emails, your writing adds a dimension to your photography that makes your work truly outstanding. The books will make wonderful gifts for some of our friends." (Robert J.) Bill C. had this to say, "I have spent parts of the last two days reading and enjoying the fruits of your incredible labors. I remember oh so well my days at at Notch Bottom. I would never be able to articulate as well as you the sensory feelings, the smells, and the optics. At times I was a bit overwhelmed by it all. At 80, these memories mean so much to me."

When he's not sitting behind the desk in the Woodson Ranch office, you can find Dave fishing a cane rod on some thin, blue line, tending to his crop of garlic, or reading a book with his wife of 32 years, Carol. If you have any questions or would like to reserve a copy of this stunning book please call

UMW Biology Graduate Nicolas Johnston Accepted into Genetics Ph.D. Program

Nicolas "Cole" Johnston, a graduate of Beaverhead High School and UMW Class of 2025, will begin Ph.D. research in human genetics this fall through the University of Iowa's Interdisciplinary Graduate Program in Genetics. His path to doctorate-level biomedical research began after transferring from engineering at Montana Tech to join the UMW biology program. Inspired by UMW's block schedule and immersive, discipline-specific practices, Cole developed a true passion for learning and a drive to excel.

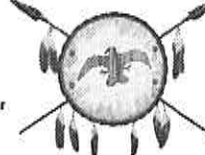

Growing up in Dillon, Cole had always heard about the strength of the Education program at UMW but wasn't as familiar with the other opportunities available. "I quickly found my calling thanks to the exceptional faculty in the Biology Department," he shared. "My parents had instilled a strong academic work ethic in me at a young age, and this work ethic was only accentuated by the interactions I had with my professors during my tenure as a biology student."

UMW Graduate Cole Johnston presenting at the 2025 national meeting of the Society of Integrative and Comparative Biology in Atlanta, GA.

His interest in research developed through an opportunity to investigate the biomechanics of head-turning behaviors in the Spiny Dogfish Shark (Squalus acanthias) with Dr. Bradley Wood. "I was fortunate enough to take a class taught by Dr. Wood in which there were only three students, including myself. With such a small class, I was able to talk to Dr. Wood one-on-one frequently, which eventually led us to discuss graduate school," Cole explains. "Before this conversation, I had not considered pursuing a Ph.D., but afterward, it was the only path that made sense to me. From that point forward, I worked tirelessly to achieve this goal."

Despite never having seen the ocean, Cole's research on sharks has provided important insight into how animals without a functional neck are able to move their heads during prey capture and processing. He presented his research at the 2025 national meeting of the Society of Integrative and Comparative Biology in Atlanta, GA, and at the annual UMW Undergraduate Research Symposium this May. He is currently working with Dr. Wood on a first-authored manuscript for publication in a scientific journal.

Although his undergraduate research experience focused on anatomical questions, Cole's interest in genetics began with a lab project in his general genetics class with Dr. Mike Gilbert. During this project, Cole learned how to clone the gene bb0769 from the spirochete Borrelia burgdorferi so it could be inserted into Escherichia coli for expression. This process was unlike anything Cole had ever done before and gave him insight into the work and thought processes involved in conducting research in molecular biology. The entire concept of creating a transgenic organism was awe-inspiring to Cole because it revealed the endless possibilities and applications contained within an organism's genome.

"The tight-knit community has allowed me to form relationships with professors that I will maintain for the rest of my life. Dr. Wood, Dr. Mike Gilbert, Dr. Michael Morrow, Dr. Michelle Anderson, and Dr. Steven Perry were all instrumental in preparing me for graduate school, as well as in helping me navigate the difficult choices that come with such a commitment. I would not be in the position I am in today without their dedication to students' success—along with the support and encouragement of my parents, sisters, and my wonderful partner, McKenzie," Cole said while reflecting on his time at UMW.

Cole's Ph.D. research at Iowa will focus on the biomedical applications of human genetics.

For more information about the UMW Biology Program, please contact the Chair of Biology, Dr. Mike Morrow, at michael.morrow@umwestern.edu.

Statewide Section 8 Housing Choice Voucher Waiting List to Reopen July 1, 2025

Commerce strongly encourages interested low-income persons and households to apply for this federal rental assistance program at commerce.mt.gov. Applicants may only apply to one of the ten regional waiting lists; wait time varies depending on the level of demand at each regional waiting list.

In addition to re-opening the Section 8 HCV waiting list, Commerce will also open a separate waiting list for the Moderate Rehabilitation Program on July 1, 2025, at 8 a.m. Wait time for MR rental units is typically shorter than the HCV Program. The application for this waiting list can also be accessed at commerce.mt.gov.

"Montanans experiencing housing instability due to rising rents and inflation-driven cost of living increases, particularly seniors on fixed incomes and persons with disabilities, can significantly benefit from these programs," said Cheryl Cohen, Commerce's Housing Division administrator. "Nearly 30,000 renter households in our state are severely housing-cost burdened, meaning they pay more than 50 percent of their monthly income for housing costs. With the support of an HCV or MR rental home, eligible households pay 30 percent of their adjusted monthly income for rent so they can breathe a bit easier and have funds each month for food, medicine and other essentials."

Applicants who are already on the HCV waiting list do not need to reapply if they have expressed continued interest in remaining on it by responding to recent letters issued by Commerce.

The Section 8 HCV and MR programs include various federal restrictions on income eligibility, citizenship or eligible immigration status and limitations on prior criminal convictions. All program criteria are included in Commerce's 2026 PHA administrative plan, available at commerce.mt.gov.

Commerce's HCV waiting list was closed on Aug. 1, 2024, due to decreased funding disbursements from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. HUD officially notified Commerce of an increase to its 2025 HCV federal budget in May 2025. Additionally, based on the Fair Market Rent Reevaluation Study conducted in late 2024, HUD approved an increase to Montana's HCV voucher payment standards. These new voucher payment standards also go into effect on July 1, 2025, and can be found at commerce.mt.gov.
