Jay Arnold Chapman

Jay Arnold Chapman passed away on June 19, 2025. Jay was born in Frederic Wisconsin, on February 17, 1934.

When Jay was 18 years old, he joined the Air Force to serve his country during the Korean War. He spent most of his military career working on airplanes as a mechanic. Jay was stationed at Hill Air Force base in Layton, Utah where he met Marlene through a friend. They were soon married after a brief courtship. Jay attended Weber State University earning his bachelor's degree. After college he worked as a social worker in Utah and Rialto, California. Jay and Marlene lived in several places before finding a home in Ogden, Utah. Together they had seven children. He and Marlene later divorced. Jay then moved to Dillon where he owned a repair shop, Chapman Auto Repair. Around this time his daughter Missy introduced him to his wife Sharon Blomquist. He bought a house in Dillon and the two of them fixed it up to their liking. Jay and Sharon sold their home and moved to Wisconsin where they resided until his passing.

Jay was preceded in death by his parents, sister Helen, daughter Jaelene (Missy) son Jeff and grandson Jeffrey. He is survived by his wife, Sharon and her son Erik (Ellyn) Wehler, Sons Kevin (Pam) Chapman, James Chapman, Brian (Francine) Chapman His daughters, Laurie Chapman Folk and Carla Ward Chapman. He has several grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Funeral services will be held on July 12th at 11:00 at Dillon Vineyard Church in Dillon Montana. Luncheon to follow.

Can society get a handlebar on this crisis?

Tyrades! by Danny Tyree

"A Classic Childhood Pastime Is Fading," blared a recent headline in "The Atlantic."

The article lamented the fact that the number of youngsters (ages 7 to 17) who report having ridden a bicycle at least six times in the past year has fallen by nearly half since the Nineties. Fewer than five percent reported riding "frequently."

(Or maybe they're just LATE in reporting, as in "Hey, Mom, I was supposed to tell you I need you to whip up a diorama of Victorian London in time for school today. And, oh yeah, Liam and I discovered an alien portal in the creepy woods outside town last Saturday.")

This data comes from the National Sporting Goods Association and is corroborated by data from the National Vegetating in the Basement Association.

Don't blame it all on the kids. Parents have not exactly set a sterling example about the need for exercise. Many young viewers have been traumatized by movies such as "The Goonies" and "E.T." ("I can't believe it — those kids are traveling around on non-stationary CLOTHES RACKS!")

But it would be misleading to perpetuate the nose-stuck-in-a-smartphone stereotype of modern youngsters. The article does not shame kids for failure to pedal around in the fresh air, but in fact acknowledges their pent-up desire for freedom.

Unfortunately, higher speed limits, heavier automobiles, ill-designed intersections and other factors have made bicycle travel a daunting task compared to the days of "The Brady Bunch."

Additionally, our shifting standards for heroes have tarnished the allure of bike-riding. Adventurous pre-teen explorers used to be placed on a pedestal. ("You went across the county line? And brought back these neat arrowheads? Cool!") Now they're more likely to have their statues torn down. ("He's a colonizer! Let's show him where he can stick his Schwinn!")

The writer opines that the navigation and decision-making of bike excursions can rewire young brains toward confidence and self-esteem. Of course, even "stay at home" or "shuttled to events by their parents" children become more creative without the crutch of a bike to leave lying in the driveway for dad to back over with the station wagon. ("Now, where did I leave those Faberge eggs?" CRUNCH!")

The article postulates that bike-friendly city planning will bring more children outdoors and thereby increase overall neighborhood bonding. ("Hey, neighbor! I'm Tommy's dad. Been dying to say hello – and borrow your chainsaw – so I can carve up that campaign sign posted by the jerk at the end of the street.")

I must admit I am an outsider on this subject. Complications from chickenpox did a number on me when I was the prime age for learning to ride a bike (leaving my sense of balance only slightly more balanced than that of an Iranian newscast covering Irving Forbush's bar mitzvah), and attempts to find a safe, peaceful practice venue as an adult invariably tempt fate. ("We normally stage the running of the bulls in Pamplona, Spain; but the GPS got it wrong by a few thousand miles.")

Still, I'm optimistic that bikes can restore their glory days, just as long as kids swerve to miss the milkman, keep their coonskin cap from blocking their vision and wear clean underwear in case they have an accident and the doctor makes a house call.

Norman Rockwell would pop a wheelie for the chance to paint the scene!

FWP announces public comment opportunity

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks is seeking public comment on the following proposal and environmental assessment (EA). For more information, including how to submit comments, visit fwp.mt.gov/public-notices.

Westslope Cutthroat Trout Restoration in Trapper and Rock Creeks, Big Hole River Drainage

FWP proposes to conserve westslope cutthroat trout Oncorhynchus clarkii lewisi (WCT) in Trapper and Rock creeks to expand their range in each drainage by removing non-native trout upstream of constructed fish barriers. Historically, WCT, Arctic grayling and mountain whitefish were the only salmonid species in the Big Hole River Valley. In Trapper and Rock creeks, WCT were native and Arctic grayling likely used the streams seasonally. However, introductions of rainbow and brook trout have reduced and threaten these WCT populations through hybridization, competition and predation, respectively.

Comment Deadline: July 11

FWP proposes changes to wolf regulations in effort to increase harvest

Commission to make final decision at August meeting

Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks is proposing changes to wolf trapping and hunting regulations aimed at bringing down the number of wolves in the state, as required by law.

FWP's proposal will go before the Montana Fish and Wildlife Commission at their Aug. 21 meeting. It is open for public comment through Aug. 4.

Wolf numbers in Montana remain relatively stable despite an increase in harvest in 2024, according to the 2024 Wolf Report. Montana law requires the Commission to pass regulations that will decrease wolf numbers to a sustainable level statewide.

FWP is proposing the following regulations:

Hunters and trappers can harvest 15 wolves on a single hunting and trapping license (30 wolves total), provided that at least five of those wolves are harvested via hunting and at least five of those wolves are harvested via trapping in FWP regions 1 or 2.

Trapping within the geographic area identified by a federal court will be limited to Jan. 1 to Feb. 15. The geographic area is all FWP regions 1, 2 and 3, and portions of regions 4 and 5. A statewide quota of 500.

The statewide quota includes a quota of 3 wolves in Wolf Management Unit 313 and a quota of three wolves in WMU 316.

On private lands wolf hunting will be allowed outside of daylight hours and hunters can use artificial light, night vision, infrared, and thermal imaging scopes.

Allowing multiple wolves to be harvested with a single hunting license will result in a decrease in revenue for FWP. During the past five years about 15 percent of hunters purchased more than one wolf license. The anticipated loss in revenue will be about $43,000.

The Commission will approve final 2025/2026 Furbearer and Wolf Regulations at its meeting Aug. 21. Commissioners can propose amendments prior to the meeting and those amendments will be posted online for public comment.

To see the full proposal for the 2025/2026 Furbearer and Wolf Regulations and to comment, go to the Aug. 21 Commission meeting webpage.
