Fishing restrictions take effect Thursday on several rivers in southwest Montana

Hoot-owl restrictions take effect Thursday at 2 p.m. on the following rivers:

- Big Hole River on the entire river downstream of Saginaw Bridge on Skinner Meadows Road. This restriction expands the hoot-owl to the entire length of the Big Hole.

- East Gallatin River from Penwell Bridge Road to the confluence with the West Gallatin River at Nixon Bridge near Manhattan.

- Gallatin River from Amsterdam Road to the confluence with the Missouri River.

- Lower Shields River from Brackett Creek Road to the confluence with the Yellowstone River.

Hoot-owl restrictions prohibit fishing from 2 p.m. to midnight each day. These restrictions will stay in effect until conditions improve.

A full angling closure takes effect at 12 a.m. Thursday on the Madison River near West Yellowstone:

- Madison River upstream of Hebgen Reservoir. This angling closure replaces an existing hoot-owl angling restriction to align with a similar closure on the Madison River within Yellowstone National Park due to exceptionally high water temperatures and low flows.

Hoot-owl restrictions took effect Wednesday on section of Bitterroot River

Hoot-owl restrictions took effect Wednesday at 2 p.m. on the Bitterroot River from Veteran's Bridge in Hamilton to the confluence with the Clark Fork River.

GRIZZLY BEAR ENCOUNTER

A grizzly bear charged a man near his residence along Foothill Road east of Kalispell on the night of July 10.

The landowner heard a disturbance outside and discovered the bear getting into a chicken coop. The bear approached him, and he shot and killed it. Fortunately, the man was uninjured in the encounter. The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service is investigating the incident.

If you are experiencing conflicts with bears, please call Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks. You can locate local contact information here - fwp.mt.gov/conservation/wildlife-management/bear/contact

Surplus drawing license to be randomized

Successful hunters to be contacted through email

Opportunities for hunters who signed up for the Surplus License List will be randomized and selected yesterday, Wednesday, July 16. The list includes licenses left over from the drawing for deer B and elk B licenses.

FWP will contact hunters who are at the top of the list via email with instructions to finalize their purchase within a specified time.

Hunters must finalize the purchase of the license within the timeframe specified in the email; otherwise, the opportunity will be offered to the next hunter on the randomized list.

This new process for the sale of surplus licenses began in 2020 in response to issues in years past.

Nonresidents who hold a Nonresident Native License, a Youth Combo License or a Nonresident College Student Combo License may purchase deer B and elk B licenses at half price.

Nonresident hunters who hold a Nonresident Combination License may possess a total of two deer B licenses. Nonresident hunters who do not hold a nonresident combination license may possess a total of one deer B license.

For more information, contact the FWP licensing office at 406-444-2950 or fwplc@mt.gov.

GIFTS

By "Swede" Troedsson

In early 2000, a couple, who had immigrated from China, moved to Dillon, Montana. The wife was hired as an Early Childhood faculty member at The University of Montana Western (UMW).

The husband, Zhiquan Qian, was a gifted artist who was recognized as a Youth Artist in China, a very prestigious designation. He was awarded several Gold Prizes in China.

In 2004, three pieces of his artwork had been selected as front cover illustrations for the spring, summer and fall catalogs of the School of Outreach at UMW.

One fall, during their tenure in Dillon, I presented them with a nice young Whitetail buck deer that I had shot. I carefully dressed out, skinned, and removed all the hair from on the deer. I suggested to Zhiquan that he could have the deer cut and wrapped at Beaverhead Meats in Dillon. Zhiquan confidently stated that he had cut up pigs in China, and he would prefer to butcher and prepare this deer himself.

Zhiquan sent me a nice thank you note and he also invited me to come to their home for dinner.

After we'd enjoyed an awesome seven course Chinese dinner, Zhiquan pointed to his numerous paintings hanging on his walls and stated I could have any one of my choice.

Being a cat lover, I chose the lovely one below, which now hangs in my living room.

Veteran's Corner Update #317

By Mike Lawson

Veteran News Updates:

- Our Marine Corps League Detachment #724, here in Butte, has it's building located across from McGruff Park, as I mentioned last week. We served breakfast on both Saturday and Sunday. People couldn't have been nicer and their compliments were appreciated. Our volunteer crew did a great job. I worked the grill, grilling eggs, pancakes, hash browns and sausages. At times it was all I could do to keep up. Our crew did food prep, served, cleaned and collected the money. Butte's legendary Coach Green, a Viet Nam Marine Veteran, was on the serving crew and kept people entertained. Again we were able to be positive hosts to this segment of our visitors. We worked as a well oiled team, giving of our time and feeling positive that we accomplished this service. By the way, the Health Inspector inspected us and passed us with flying colors. Ooh Rah as we Marines say.

- I attended an outdoor fish fry at our SW Montana Veteran's Home earlier in the week. Myron Wegley was the cook and the fisherman who caught the Walleye and Northern Pike. His wife Cheryl spearheaded putting this together. The fish was delicious and the Veterans, living there, who attended enjoyed themselves. Some of these veterans I knew well and it was great to visit with them. Again, volunteers in action to enhance those in need.

- With the floods in Texas and New Mexico and the the recent tornados and other natural disasters, it's important to know that Veterans who are victims can get help from the VA. For the latest updates and information visit the VA's Disaster Help website. If you're a Veteran who is homeless because you lost your home in a disaster and need immediate housing assistance, call the National Call Center for Homeless Veterans. This is available 24/7: 1-8774Aid Vets (1-877-424-3838)

- Lately I've seen a number of Veterans with service and companion dogs. I read an article, recently, that said having one of these dogs is one of the most important ways of reducing Veteran suicide. In my opinion whatever it takes to reduce Veteran's suicide is a right answer. Seeing these Veterans with their dogs and the relationship of caring they have for them is therapeutic to say the least.

It's time to bring this column to a close. Our weather is getting warmer and in the high 80s (hot for us). It's time to get out in our great outdoors. In 5 or 6 months we'll be complaining about the cold and dreaming about the summer weather of today. May you all have a great week.

Letter to the Editor Democracy or Hijacking?

Recently, the Montana Republican Party (commonly known as MTGOP) held its annual convention in Helena, with the primary goal of electing new leaders for the upcoming two years. A significant development from the convention was the decision to remove nine senators who had been censured by the party earlier this year for their actions during the legislative session, which undermined Republican power in the Senate and effectively handed control to the Democrats. During the convention, a senator proposed a motion to take away the credentials of these nine senators, effectively kicking them out of the convention. Following the proper procedures, this motion required two separate votes, but ultimately, it passed with a strong majority, and the senators were asked to leave. Nothing was hijacked by any specific group. Motions were made, the chairman ruled, a motion was made to overrule the chair, and then the voting began. The vote was called by name, allowing legislators, elected officials, and representatives from local party committees to weigh in. Interestingly, when legislators voted, the results were almost even, but when it came to the local central committees, the majority strongly supported removing the senators. This decision sparked a lot of discussions and media coverage, with various accusations arising in the aftermath.

So, what exactly is the MTGOP? Like any group or organization, it consists of individuals who share similar views and come together to achieve common goals. Each person who had the right to vote at the convention was selected by others in their community, from local central committees to federal lawmakers. The MTGOP operates as a democracy, where the majority's vote determines the direction of the party. There are no appointments or assigned roles, no "party bosses" or dictators; instead, these individuals collaborate to create a party platform that outlines their beliefs and goals. This platform is revisited and updated every few years, with changes being voted on by elected representatives. It's similar to a group of kids forming a "club" during recess, where they establish their own rules and consequences for those who don't follow them. Once again, everything is subject to a vote, and the majority rules.

Currently, there is a small group within our party that insists they are the "true" Republicans. This group supports the actions and votes of the nine specific senators, aligning closely with their views and votes. In contrast, the majority of attendees at the convention feel that this group has strayed from the core values of the Republican Party. It's well-known that some of the main principles we stand for include having a limited government, promoting personal freedom and responsibility, cutting government spending, and upholding a pro-life position. So, it's concerning when members of our party vote against these principles yet claim to represent them. This year's legislative session provided several examples of this disconnect. Issues include expanding Medicaid, increasing spending in government departments, and funding non-government organizations through government grants. There have been significant developments, such as the establishment of large state-run trust funds like the Growth and Opportunity Fund, aimed at financing various government programs. Additionally, there has been insufficient action to reform our judicial system, and budget surpluses have not been returned to taxpayers. These actions have raised considerable concerns among many members of the party.

Many people, myself included, don't have a significant issue with how a legislator votes. The real problem arises when a legislator claims to represent true conservative values yet votes in ways that contradict those beliefs and the party platform, thus disenfranchising their constituents who elected them. This year, we saw nine senators team up with Democrats to weaken the majority party's power, and some members of the House of Representatives also collaborated with Democrats to approve large spending bills. Thankfully, Governor Gianforte stepped in and vetoed much of this spending to help keep the budget under control. These decisions upset voters across the state, who have overwhelmingly chosen a Republican majority in the last three presidential elections to go to the state capital and advocate for a conservative agenda.

Some are arguing that by denying the nine senators the chance to vote on party leadership, their constituents have been disenfranchised. But what about those same constituents who believed they were electing conservative legislators—individuals who understood what the Republican Party stood for—only to see them change course from day one? The situation came to a head at this year's convention, where changes were proposed, and we are now witnessing the consequences. More attention is being given to many legislators and their voting records, revealing where they truly stand on important issues.

At the convention, Senate President Matt Regier delivered an inspiring speech centered on the idea of "authenticity." He urged us lawmakers to be genuine and transparent about our beliefs and positions. If you identify as a "moderate" and support big government spending, it's important to openly share that with the public. Don't claim to be a staunch conservative or strict constitutionalist if your actions and votes don't align with those values. Misleading voters in this way is unfair to those who elected you.

I completely agree with his message, and I believe we're witnessing this play out right now. With this year's legislative session coming to an end, many voters are reflecting on the decisions made by their representatives. This has stirred frustration among Republican voters. There are plenty of accusations, heated discussions, and even lawsuits happening as a result. It's clear that voters are more engaged than they have been in years. Voters are tired of deception, frustrated with the government, and seeking the truth. The silver lining in all of this is that there will inevitably be another election cycle. Each of us will have the chance to explain our voting decisions to our constituents. So, if you've faced criticism for being kicked out of the Republican Party or labeled as a "Republican in Name Only" (RINO), this is your opportunity to connect with voters and clarify why you chose to identify with the party. I get to do that too. Ultimately, it will be up to them to decide.

Just remember to be authentic!

Basement Apartment

Open the door to this spacious mid century modern home at 606 S Arizona Street on a fully landscaped corner lot near UM Western. Step in one of three birch outside doors and marvel at the craftsman and character of this well constructed home. The large eat-in kitchen boast birch cabinets, updated counter tops and back splash, newer appliances, and a pet feeding station. Meander down the hall past a 1/2 bath to a row of storage and coat closets. The comfortable living area features several build-ins to display your keepsakes, a large picture window, and new carpet. The primary bedroom has custom closets and a retro-vibe tiled en-suite bathroom. Two additional bedrooms, a bathroom with accessible shower and tons of storage are situated off the living area. Enjoy the Sun-room with over 40' of windows facing the fenced back yard. A pass-thru window to the kitchen offers ease for entertaining.

A newly renovated basement with 1500s.f. lends itself to multi generational living, short term rental or extra space for a large family. Two basement bedrooms are non-conforming. All rooms, bedrooms, bathroom, kitchen, laundry and storage are accessible through the garage or the main floor living room.

Property has an attached 3 car garage with 2 storage rooms and a work bench. The outside brick planters, UGS and mature trees provide privacy and ease of maintenance.
