Montana Tech graduate student takes top award at 2025 American Society of Reclamation Sciences competition

Dan Kelly, (B.S. Biological Sciences, 2023), a graduate student in Montana Technological University's M.S. in Ecological Restoration program, earned 1st place in the Student Oral Presentation competition at the 2025 American Society of Reclamation Sciences (ASRS) Annual Meeting, held in Butte in June.

Kelly's faculty advisor is Dr. Robert Pal, and his research is focused on restoring disturbed ecosystems. For the competition, Kelly presented on his primary project site where he, with the help of the Youth Employment Program (YEP) out of Dillon, MT, installed 295 of the 412 so-called "modified brush layers" (MBLs), southeast of Sugarloaf Peak. These MBLs were tailored to prevent hillside erosion, catalyze soil recovery, and revegetate barren areas left barren by anthropogenic influence during decades of mining, logging, and smelting operations.

Youth Employment Program (YEP) Crew Members from Dillon, MT

"I sincerely appreciate the support and assistance of all those directly involved in this graduate study," Kelly said. "Attending the American Society of Reclamation Sciences (ASRS) conference was a fantastic experience, and I look forward to participating in future events. Presenting my research, 'Repurposing Woody Debris via Fuel Reduction Practices to Enhance Hillside Stability and Soil Seedbank Recovery,' was a rewarding opportunity and I was thrilled by the strong interest shown in this low-tech restoration approach. I'm excited about the potential to publish this work in one of the ASRS journals. I'm truly grateful to ASRS and Dr. Pal for the opportunity to present and proudly represent the Montana Tech Restoration and Biology Departments."

The mission of the American Society of Reclamation Sciences (ASRS) is to support a diverse global community—including scientists, industry professionals, educators, technicians, planners, and regulators—who are engaged in mineral extraction and the reclamation of disturbed ecosystems.

ASRS advances both basic and applied reclamation science through research, knowledge sharing, and professional development. This is accomplished through its annual conferences, workshops, publications, newsletters, and its journals Reclamation Matters and Reclamation Sciences, as well as the ASRS website.

Innovators Award. Secretary Jacobsen's "Death of a Loved One" initiative was recognized and honored during the 2025 NASED Summer Conference in Oklahoma City.

Earlier this year, election workers and funeral directors joined Secretary Jacobsen at the Montana State Capitol to celebrate the "Death of a Loved One" initiative's filing into Montana law. The project, which included House Bill 248, sponsored by Rep. Braxton Mitchell (R-Columbia Falls), simplifies and eases the process for a family to remove a deceased loved one from Montana's voter rolls. It allows families to cancel a loved one's voter registration with an obituary published by a funeral home, media organization, or other entity.

Secretary Jacobsen also established partnerships and collaborations with Montana's funeral home leaders, creating a brochure that families receive as part of their grievance packet from the funeral home. The brochure gives families simple instructions on how to cancel a loved one's Montana voter registration.

"Our goal through my 'Death of a Loved One' initiative was to balance the important task of voter list maintenance with a compassionate and accessible experience for families struggling with the loss of a loved one," said Secretary Jacobsen. "We're grateful to be recognized with the 2025 NASED Innovators Award, which signifies our commitment to serving our Montana voters."

"Secretary Jacobsen was proud to partner with the Montana Funeral Directors Association to create a meaningful impact by supporting families during the challenging time of losing a loved one," added Elections Director Austin James. "The Secretary aimed to provide a simple and gracious way to support families during their grief, and we're pleased that our brochure and legislative changes made this possible."

Funeral homes across Montana have requested the brochure to include in their grievance packets, and the Montana Funeral Directors Association shared their gratitude for the partnership earlier this year: "We are thankful to Secretary of State Jacobsen and election officials across the state for the partnership. Our members have found Secretary Jacobsen's brochure extremely helpful in providing information to families."

The NASED Innovators Award highlights innovative training procedures, technologies, partnerships, and practices from the 50 states, the District of Columbia, and the five U.S. territories. Under Secretary Jacobsen's leadership, Montana was named the recipient of the award for the first time

A Reminder of the Past - by Bette Hull

Harold M. Warner, age 60, Died December 16, 1955

Harold M. Warner Dillon Merchant Died Here Friday

Dillon was shocked by the loss last Friday of one of its most prominent and highly regarded citizens—Harold M. Warner, proprietor of Warner's Food Store here. Mr. Warner died in his sleep during the night. His health had been impaired of late and he had recently returned from treatment at a Butte hospital, but appeared to be much improved and was at the store last Thursday, as he had been for several days.

He was the second community leader to die within the week under similar circumstances. Joseph C. Wedum passed away in his sleep on Monday, Dec. 12, at his home here.

The sudden and unexpected passing of Mr. Warner was a grievous blow to his wife and family, to whom he was a devoted husband and father.

The profusion of flowers and hundreds of messages of sympathy received, showed the wide esteem he had won as the warm and sincere friend of hundreds of people in all walks of life.

Funeral services were held at 2 p.m. Monday in the Chapel of the Church of Latter Day Saints by Bishop Weldon Payne, and tributes were also paid by Vaughn Taylor and Donald J. Smith. Choral music was by the LDS singing Mothers. Graveside rites were held at Mountain View cemetery.

The Pallbearers were Lester Kurz, Hiram Martinell, Pete Peterson, Roy Gowan, William Wellborn and Roy Stocker.

Mr. Warner was 60 years old.
