COATS MISSING GIVEN TO BARGAIN BASEMENT

Coats were given to the Bargain Basement by mistake. These coats are very sentimental and I would REALLY like to get them back.

There were two mens light nylon coats. The first one had a Critter Control logo on it. Black with white letters and the second had an Alpine Log Homes logo and was red with white letters.

If you have seen or bought these coats I would really like go get them back! Call 406-865-0586 or contact Bargain Basement. Please help. Thank you!

Montana Western Women's Basketball Announces Wes Knox as Assistant Coach

First year UMW Women's Basketball Coach Ryan Sullivan announced the hiring of assistant coach Wes Knox on Friday.

"This hire is special. Not only is Wes an incredibly knowledgeable and passionate coach, but he's also one of my closest friends and former college teammates. We've been through a lot together, as players and as coaches." UMW Head Coach Ryan Sullivan said. "I couldn't be more excited to have him by my side again, this time at the collegiate level. Wes brings a lot of strengths to the table, but in my opinion his greatest strength as a coach is his ability to empathize with athletes and with his colleagues. He obviously brings a depth of knowledge in the game of basketball, but he truly understands the people he works with. He will be an asset to this University and the people he works closely with will be better for their time spent with him."

Knox joins Montana Western after two years as assistant girls' basketball coach at Sheridan HS in Sheridan, Wyo., where he coached under Sullivan.

Prior to his time at Sheridan, Knox gained a wealth of experience at the AAU and club level.

Knox gained collegiate basketball experience as a player for both Montana Western (2013-14) and Montana (2012).

The Dillon, Mont., native earned his bachelor's from University of Montana in 2019. A 2012 graduate of Beaverhead County HS in Dillon, Knox was a three-sport athlete in high school, playing basketball, football, and running track

Burials at First Baptist Church of Dillon?

We are researching James Alexander Stark Agee, known locally as Allie Stark. She was born in Missouri in 1878 and was given the name of her father, James Alexander Stark, who had died a few months before her birth. She was married to John Calvin Agee. They had several children, four of whom were with her when she left Idaho and came to Dillon about 1913, where she died in 1917. Her death certificate, her obits and her funeral record all say or suggest Allie was buried in Mountain View Cemetery, although the city did not record her burial. This in itself does not mean much, as the city neglected to record many burials in those days.

Someone has said that Allie Stark was first buried in the church yard of the First Baptist Church in Dillon and that the burials at the church were moved to Mountain View Cemetery when the new church was built. The original church, erected in 1887, was demolished in early 1946 due to previous earthquake damage and rebuilt on the same site in 1948. We can find no mention or evidence of burials at the Baptist church; no burial records of any removed from the Baptist church yard and reburied at Mountain View Cemetery; no news clips regarding removal of burials from the church yard, neither during demolition of the original church nor during erection of the new one; no photos that show graves at the church before it was demolished.

Were there ever burials in the church yard of First Baptist Church of Dillon? Anyone who has information on this please email Beaver Head Hunters Genealogical Society at beaverheadhunters@gmail.com.

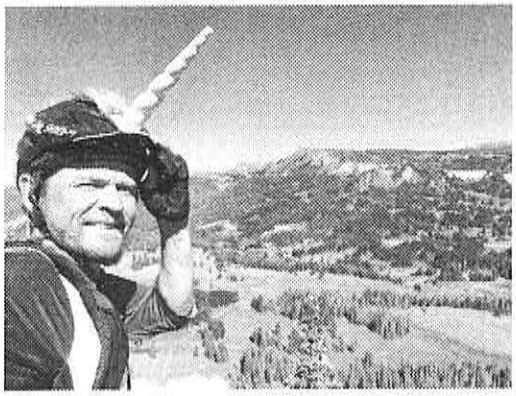
Unicycling Unicorn Unique Adventure



Jamey Mossengren, better known as The Unicycling Unicorn, has just completed one of the most challenging adventures on earth: the 3,100-mile Continental Divide Trail (CDT) — and he did half of it on one wheel.

In 2023, Mossengren hiked half of the CDT. This summer, he returned to finish the journey in a way no one ever has before — "uni-packing," his twist on bikepacking where you carry all your gear on a mountain unicycle. "It's just like bikepacking," he says, "except you only get half a bike to strap everything to."

Starting in Grants, New Mexico two months ago, he pedaled and hiked north to finish near Yellowstone National Park. In doing so, Mossengren became the first person in the world to hike half and unicycle half of the CDT — not to be confused with the Great Divide Mountain Bike Route, which follows easier dirt and paved roads.

This year's journey carried a deeply personal purpose. Earlier in 2025, Mossengren's beloved sister died by suicide. "I needed to spend time in nature to help let the mountains heal my broken heart," he says. While he didn't set out to make the ride a fundraiser, by the time he finished, he decided to donate $1,000 to the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention (afsp.org) and encourages others to make a donation of any amount. "Please call 988 or even send me a DM if you need help," he adds.

To navigate the complicated logistics, Mossengren employed a creative seven-wheel strategy: his Sprinter van, a moped, and his trusty unicycle. He would park the van at a trailhead, scooter north with the unicycle strapped to the moped, ride the unicycle south back to the van, then leapfrog ahead — all while making sure he covered every mile.

This is far from Mossengren's first epic feat. He has thru-hiked the 2,200-mile Appalachian Trail, 300-mile Superior Hiking Trail, and most of the 2,600-mile Pacific Crest Trail, in addition to uni-packing the 500-mile Colorado Trail, 800-mile Arizona Trail, and 700-mile Oregon Timber Trail. Last year, he even set a Guinness World Record by riding a 44-foot-tall unicycle.

Despite a couple of flat tires, worn-out bearings, and plenty of "UPD's" (unplanned dismounts), Mossengren completed the journey without serious injury. Along the way, he shared daily video updates on YouTube, Instagram, and Facebook — always giving a trigger warning before discussing sensitive topics like mental health and suicide, ensuring his followers can engage at their own comfort level.

To follow his adventures, search "The Unicycling Unicorn" online — this mystical creature is hard to miss.

State Auditor James Brown Joins in Approving Over $1.5 Million Revenue for MT Schools

Auditor James Brown joined his State Land Board colleagues to review and approve multiple projects benefiting the state's trust beneficiaries and public institutions. The August Land Board meeting highlighted key initiatives generating an estimated $1.5 million in revenues for the people of Montana.

"The land board meeting shows a continued commitment to Montana students and strengthening our communities" said Commissioner Brown. These revenues will provide lasting impacts on Montana students for generations to come."

They approved the following revenue-generating actions:

- Cabin & Homesite Sales (Estimated)
  - o Flathead County: $1,480,000 projected from cabin and homesite revenues
  - o Sanders County: $90,000 anticipated from additional homesite receipts
  - o Total Cabin & Homesite Revenues: $1,570,000
- Easements
  - o Counties Benefiting: Choteau, Gallatin, Garfield, Granite counties
  - o Revenues of $26,152 from new easements ensuring continued access and stewardship of state lands

The Board's actions are estimated to generate $1,596,152 in revenue, directly benefiting Montana's state trust funds and educational initiatives.

The Montana Land Board consists of the top five statewide elected officials. The board manages millions of acres of state trust lands, ensuring both financial returns for trust beneficiaries and responsible land stewardship for future generations.
