Montana Western Fine Arts Gallery Presents "The Indigenous Salish of Central and Western Montana Lifeways and Perspectives"

The University of Montana Western Fine Arts Gallery is honored to present "The Indigenous Salish of Central and Western Montana Lifeways and Perspectives" by Salish artist, archaeologist, and Salish Kootenai College professor Tim Ryan. The exhibition opens Friday, September 5, and will feature a gallery reception and artist talk from 5:00 to 7:00 p.m. in the Fine Arts Gallery, located in Main Hall. The Beaverhead County Museum will also host a public presentation by Tim on September 4 at the Old Depot Theatre at 6:30 p.m.

Tim Ryan is an enrolled member of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation. Through the seasonal rounds and material culture of the Salish, he will tell the story of his tribe's relationship to the landscapes of Montana, how they thrived beyond survival, and the success of his tribe in contemporary times. His work embodies the material culture and traditional, place-based ecological knowledge preserved by his ancestors for thousands of years. His research of tribal seasonal rounds, lifeways, and economy has led him to reconstruct the traditional tools and material goods used by his ancestors.

Tim grew up exploring the mountains and valleys in and around the Flathead Reservation and the extended homelands of his tribe. He is currently employed at Salish Kootenai College as a faculty member of Culture and Language Studies and as an Indigenous STEM instructor for the Native American Studies Division. He provides experiential learning on subjects of culture and science, in addition to teaching traditional skills and outdoor habitation.

He is also a consultant and educator for the Indian Education for All programming administered by the State of Montana. He creates authentic, museum-quality goods constructed with traditional methods and materials, which are used in museum displays and educational trunks. The University of Montana, Montana State University, and public schools, museums, and interpretive centers in Montana, Washington, Idaho, and Canada have requested his presentations, coursework on American Indian culture, and knowledge of the Northwest.

In addition, he is a Project Supervisor for the summer youth program Mission Mountain Youth Crew, which performs forest restoration with career-track exposure in natural resource fields. Previously, Tim was a business partner and field supervisor in the archaeological firm EthnoTech. Before launching his firm, he worked with the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes Historic Preservation Department as supervisor of archaeological field survey and GIS/GPS mapping. He also founded Ancestral Skills & Technologies Northwest, a program dedicated to teaching and preserving his tribe's ancestral ways of life.

Tim's experiences with his elders' teachings, his decades-long study of traditional ecological knowledge, ethnobotany, and Indigenous sciences, and his extensive work in field archaeology bring a unique quality and perspective to his teachings and outdoor experiential opportunities.

Tim will be giving several educational workshops and presentations throughout this exhibit at the University of Montana Western. The university is proud to host this cross-disciplinary educational opportunity.

"The Indigenous Salish of Central and Western Montana Lifeways and Perspectives" will be on display in Montana Western's Fine Arts Gallery from September 5 to October 17. Gallery hours are Monday through Friday, 9:00 to 11:00 a.m. and 1:00 to 3:00 p.m. The September 5 gallery reception is open to all and will feature light refreshments. We look forward to seeing you there!

Attorney General Knudsen asks SCOTUS about rights case against woke public school

Montana Attorney General Austin Knudsen led a 22-state coalition that filed a brief in support of parental rights and in opposition to a Massachusetts school district's policy that allows the "social transitioning" of children without parental consent, stripping parents of their longstanding and fundamental right to direct the care and upbringing of their children.

The brief asks the Supreme Court of the United States (SCOTUS) to take up the case and reverse the flawed First Circuit Court of Appeals ruling that affirmed the district court's decision in 2023 in favor of the school's policy.

In the brief, Attorney General Knudsen argues the First Circuit's decision should be reversed because hundreds of years of tradition and history recognize the importance of a parent's rights to direct the care and upbringing of their children and schools cannot make decisions rooted in parental power without parental consent.

Rather than make decisions for parents and their children, schools have a duty to support parents, not supersede and undermine their direction. Policies as concerning as Ludlow's set a dangerous precedent in family decision making and violate the trust between parents and schools while violating parental rights.

Letter to the Editor
 Reach Our Goal
 George & Donna Fryett
 George's almost 80th birthday reminded me of the August day in 1995 that we discovered our Montana home. We had been looking for a home for a long time all over Montana. Then we saw an ad in the Dillon Tribune for a house and some acres out of town! We drove out on muddy unfamiliar roads! It was raining with lots of thunder and lightening all the way. We found the house. It was deserted, both the house and barn needed 'Help'!
 The test was to see if we could get a telephone connection. It worked! We called Jim McIsacc to come out and show the house. One big room - kitchen - bathroom and upstairs room.
 We made an offer-and after lot of paperwork we moved in! Over the years whenever we had money, George and I worked on the house!
 Many people often said - "you can't do it"! We did it anyway! It took 'Love and hard work!
 PS I'm still making improvements!
