Bear incidents in southwest Montana a reminder for hunters to be vigilant

Even though the weather is cooling, bears are still active around the state and with so many hunters in the field, encounters can be more common.

This time of year, both black and grizzly bears are spending more of their time looking for food in preparation for winter. Also, with hunting season underway, bears in an active hunting area may be finding carcasses left by successful hunters. When bear activity and human activity increases, so does the likelihood of bear encounters.

Recently in southwest Montana, in separate incidents, two hunters encountered grizzly bears while in the field. In both instances, the bears charged the hunters, and they shot at the bears to deter the attack. Fortunately, in both instances the hunters were uninjured.

In late October, a hunter on Landon Ridge in the south end of the Gravelly Mountains was hunting in thick cover. A bear charged him from close range, and he fired one shot from his hunting rifle, and the bear ran off. The hunter didn't know if he hit the bear.

On Nov. 1, a hunter in the north fork of Wolf Creek in the Madison Valley was charged by a bear from close range. He fired his rifle to deter the attack, and the bear ran off. He wasn't sure if he hit the bear.

Both circumstances happened in remote locations with high densities of grizzly bears. FWP staff interviewed the hunters, but given the remote locations, FWP staff likely won't investigate further. Access to Wolf Creek is through private land, and homeowners in the area have been notified.

Trail closure in Bear Creek

FWP and the Beaverhead National Forest have closed Bear Creek Trail 6326 for 1 mile south from the junction of 6326 and Helmet Pass Trail (6357), see map here. The trail is on both Bear Creek Wildlife Management Area and Beaverhead National Forest.

The closure is in place due to a dead horse on the trail in an active area for grizzly bears.

The closure will be in place until Nov. 17.

Be bear aware during hunting season

Bears will continue to be active during hunting seasons this fall. Here are some precautions to help hunters avoid bear encounters:

- Carry bear spray and have it accessible.
- Watch for and be extra cautious around bear sign, creeks and areas with limited visibility. Most incidents happen in surprise, close encounters.
- Hunt with a group of people. This can help you make localized noise to alert bears to your presence, and groups of people are more likely to deter a bear than a solo hunter.
- Make noise when you can, like after you've harvested an

- animal or when you're hiking back to your vehicle.
- Be aware that elk calls and cover scents can attract bears.
- When retrieving a harvested animal, use extra caution.
- Bring the equipment and people needed to help field dress game and remove the meat from where it was harvested as quickly as possible.
- If you need to leave part of the meat in the field during retrieval, hang it at least 10 feet off the ground, if possible, and at least 100 yards from the gut pile. Leave it in an open area where it can be observed from a distance.
- Upon your return, observe the meat with binoculars. Make noise while approaching the meat. If it has been disturbed or if a bear is in the area, leave and call FWP.
- Follow food storage orders from the applicable land management agency.

KOREAN CUISINE
By "Swede" Troedsson

During 1954 -1955 I was stationed with the First Marine Division in Korea.

In the fall of 1954, a buddy of mine was invited to dinner in a nearby Korean village.

When my buddy returned to our base after dinner, I asked him what he thought of the dinner.

He replied that it was a great dinner. After dinner he found out that the dinner featured dog meat!

We had pet dogs on our base. The incentives for the dogs to stay on the base were: food, TLC, and not ending up on a dinner plate!

Hunting regulations proposals available for public comment

Montana Fish Wildlife & Parks hunting regulation proposals are available for public review and comment, with the exception of black bear, deer, and elk regulations. Those proposals will be available for public review and comment by Thursday.

The Montana Fish and Wildlife Commission will make a final decision on the regulations at their meeting Dec. 4 in Helena. The deadline for public comment on the regulation proposals is Nov. 23.

"Our staff is dedicated to working with hunters, landowners and other members of the public on developing these hunting regulation proposals," said FWP Director Christy Clark. "This public comment period is a critical next step for Montanans who want a say in how hunting regulations look for the next two years."

In Montana, the commission approves hunting regulations every two years (except furbearer and wolf trapping and hunting regulations are approved every year), during which regulations go through an expansive review that includes a lengthy public process starting in the spring and culminating with the commission meeting in December. The commission often addresses smaller changes to regulations on an annual basis.

This biennial public process involves scoping meetings around the state in the spring in which FWP staff hear from the public about things they'd like to see changed in the regulations. Staff take those suggestions and develop regulation proposals that are now out for public comment.

FWP staff are still working on the black bear, deer, and elk regulation proposals and those will be available for public review and comment by Thursday.

Commissioners can suggest amendments to the regulation proposals. If these amendments are offered before the meeting on Dec. 4, there will be an opportunity for written public comment. Commissioners can also propose amendments during their meeting on Dec. 4. The public can comment on all regulations proposals during the meeting.

Along with the hunting regulation proposals, the commission will take up the following agenda items:

- Bull River Wildlife Management Are fuels reduction project
- Game damage, wildlife health, urban wildlife quota authorizations
- A habitat conservation lease

FWP will be hosting public meetings around the state to discuss the

There will be a public hearing on Nov. 12, 2025, 5-7 pm at Dillon City Hall. The hearing is hosted by the Dillon Local Government Study Commission. It's purpose is to gather public comment concerning the form and operation of our city government. Title 7, Chapter 3 of the Montana Code Annotated defines the scope and limits of voter government review.

The Study Commission recently conducted a local government survey and public forum in order to determine topics of public interest. The following is a list of some of the governing structures and powers repeatedly expressed by the public for review:

- Ward and at large selection of City Council Members
- Professionalism of city government and the City Manager-Council form of local government
- Enforcement of present laws-ordinances
- Street maintenance
- Combining city-county services
- The public wants or at the least is open to change

Our review is not limited to these topics, but these are topics that keep reoccurring during our information gathering. Governance can only improve through the public's involvement. PLEASE come and express your opinions on November 12.
