High winds Cause Downed Trees And Power Lines Across Dillon Wednesday MorningJeremy Crawford, Southwestern Montana News*

Strong wind gusts swept through Dillon Wednesday morning, knocking down trees and power lines across the community.

Wind gusts were reported in the high 50-mph range, according to weather apps, prompting multiple calls for service to local first responders. Crews responded to several reports of downed power lines and fallen trees throughout town.

A power pole fell in the parking lot of the Big Town Pump, causing power outages in the surrounding area. Trees were also reported down across Pioneer Drive, creating roadway hazards.

At the Evergreen Center, a large pine tree fell and scraped the side of the building, narrowly missing it causing slight damage.

First responders were also called to Lakner Lane for what was initially reported as a power line down across the roadway; however, it was later determined to be a cable line.

In addition, first responders in Lima and Dell are responding to a rolled semi truck. More information on that incident will be released as it becomes available.

Residents are urged to use caution, avoid downed lines, and report hazards to authorities.

Dreaming of a white Christmas

by Tom Purcell

The Northeast was blanketed with snow last weekend, and I loved it — because I love how snow humbles us.

When it snows in my hometown of Pittsburgh, people pour out into the streets. We shovel sidewalks and driveways, invigorated by the crisp air and the physical work. We sip hot coffee as we enjoy cheerful conversations with neighbors.

Snow still fills me with the same joy I felt as a boy when school was canceled. I still feel the urge to grab my Flexible Flyer sled and head for the steepest hill I can find — just to laugh like a kid again for a few hours.

I lived in Washington, D.C., for nearly eight years, and I loved when it snowed there, too — for different reasons.

Merry Christmas

As the year comes to an end, we're grateful to protect Montana families and businesses.

Here for you now and in 2026.

This is the city where allegedly smart people decide what's best for the rest of us. They pass complex laws few of them read. Regulators interpret those laws into rules nobody understands.

But let a few white flakes fall from the sky, and panic sets in.

Government offices shut down. Schools close. People who lecture the rest of us about hoarding toilet paper and bottled water suddenly flock to stores to hoard both.

Snow is real, you see. It falls when it wants. We can slip on it. We can wreck our cars. Our mail carriers can fall on our sidewalks — which is why we get up early to make them safe.

Snow reminds us that despite all our technology, we control very little in life. I learned that lesson on Christmas Eve, 1976.

The snow started coming down hard a few hours after we arrived at my aunt's house in the country, about 20 miles from home. I was 14. My five sisters and I were growing up. Only the youngest still believed in Santa Claus.

The drive there had been tense. Teenagers don't enjoy being packed into a station wagon, and my father was in a somber mood. He had lost both of his parents young, and the joyfulness of Christmas didn't always come easily to him.

But inside the house, the mood changed. My mother's family was large — five siblings with 26 children among them — and the place buzzed with laughter.

The snow came fast.

My father urged us to leave early. On the highway, the snow muffled the sound of the tires. It felt like we were gliding through the countryside in a massive sleigh.

My father tuned the radio to old-time broadcasts on KDKA that the station aired every Christmas Eve.

Don Ameche and Frances Langford were arguing in "The Bickersons," a 1940s show about an unhappy couple. Ameche thanked Langford for the breakfast oatmeal she left on the stove.

"That isn't oatmeal!" she said. "I'm wallpapering."

We laughed heartily at the performance — my father's booming laugh most prominent of all.

It felt like we were in another era, when families gathered together in the living room in front of their wooden cathedral radios.

Later, our grandmother told us stories of Christmas when she was a child.

We sang Christmas carols.

The snow gave us a wonderful peacefulness and calm that night. It's the best Christmas Eve I ever had.

I pray every family will enjoy a white Christmas this year.

Kyle Gruhler Receives Fourth Offensive Player of the Week Honor

Montana Western men's basketball player Kyle Gruhler earned his fourth Erck Hotels/ Frontier Conference Men's Basketball Offensive Player of the Week award of the campaign, the conference office announced Monday.

Gruhler led the Bulldogs to another 2-0 weekend in conference, defeating Valley City State 89-79 and Mayville State 91-69.

The senior averaged 28.0 points, 5.5 rebounds, and 3.5 assists on the weekend.

He shot 69.0 percent from the field (20-29), 68.4 percent from beyond the arc (13-19), and made all three free throw attempts over the two contests.

The Vancouver, Wash., native led all players in scoring in both outings, dropping 24 against the Vikings and a career-high matching 32 points against the Comets. He has registered 30 or more points in four games this year.

Gruhler went 4-4 from distance against VCSU and drained a career-high nine threes against MSU.

Veteran's Corner Update #339 By Mike Lawson

Veteran News Updates:

- Our Toys For Tot's campaign is really busy and will be for another week. Here in Butte we operate our campaign, for our part of Southwest Montana, out of our Marine Corps building, we call the "Hooch". Our Santa Helper Volunteers are very busy inventorying toys collected and toys going out to the kids. Selecting the toys for each kid and putting them into that child's individual bag, takes time. These Volunteers do a great job and say it's like shopping for each child. I have an enclosed trailer which I pull with my pick-up. Three of us went on a 150 mile round trip journey to deliver toy bags to over 50 families in Dillon and Twin Bridges, which draws families from the towns in the Ruby Valley. On this TFT's delivery we go through valleys bordered by 5 mountain ranges, cross 4 rivers and travel by many ranches and farms. When doing this and seeing the cattle and wildlife, the realization of just how rural we are really sinks in. We're fortunate to live in this beautiful part of the world.

- With the rising cost of groceries, many family budgets might not stretch as far as they once did. Some find the need to skip meals and lack access to fresh food or need financial help. Veterans are 7.4 % more likely than non-Veterans to face food insecurity, according to the USDA. Food insecurity is linked to health issues like mental health challenges. If it goes long-term, increases in health issues, such as obesity, diabetes and depression can occur. Many of us feel that no one should choose between paying for food and other essentials. The VA offers help in a variety of ways. Contact the VA Food Security Office (FSO). Other outreach programs that the VA supports are : Food distribution events, Onsite VA food pantries, local Food Banks, Federal nutrition programs, etc. Local distribution sites can be found at Food Finder online. For more information you can contact your local VA and speak with a registered dietitian.

It's time to bring this to a close. Continue to enjoy this season and look out for the kids, give something to those that are homeless or in need. For those of you who pray, pray for peace and for the ones who were recently victims of the mass shootings in Australia and Rhode Island. Heartbreaking.
