Commerce Announces Montana Main Street Program Mural Project

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: Jan. 15, 2026

The Montana Department of Commerce announced it has launched a new web page featuring exterior murals in its Montana Main Street Program communities. The MMS Program awards competitive grant funding to member cities and towns for projects related to downtown revitalization, development and historic preservation. The program also offers technical assistance to MMS communities.

To promote visitation and generate more widespread interest in its network communities, the MMS Program created its mural project and began compiling an inventory of murals in member cities and towns. This inventory, which currently contains 117 murals, can be accessed on Commerce's website. Web visitors can view a map of murals by location and learn about the meaning behind each one.

Marta Bertoglio, director of the Montana Department of Commerce, stated, "These murals are a way for Montanans to show the world what makes us who we are. They are an expression of our identities and our stories as individuals and communities. Our Montana Main Street Program's mural project gives these pieces visibility and makes them more accessible for both residents and visitors."

One mural, found in Broadus, is "The Good Hunting Grounds" by Miah Chalfant Real Bird. This piece tells the story of Powder River County, Northern Cheyenne Tribe hunting grounds and the settlers of the area.

Another, entitled "The 406 Mural," was done during a community workshop where Great Falls residents were taught to spray paint. Together, they created the painting and local artist Cameron Moberg overlayed Montana's "406" area code to tie it all together.

No matter the subject, these murals, and others like them, facilitate artistic and cultural expression, community identity, beautification of public places and local engagement.

The mural project is ongoing; MMS network communities are encouraged to submit more mural photos on the project webpage.

Currently, there are 38 MMS communities. The MMS Program was established in 2005 and is administered by Commerce's Community MT Division. Funding for the program comes from Senate Bill 540. For more information, visit commerce.mt.gov.

Collaborative effort keeps Montana mussel free

Montana remains invasive mussel-free due to the hard work of FWP's AIS team, AIS partners and the cooperation of watercraft owners stopping at AIS inspection stations.

Partners include several conservation districts, tribes, city and county governments and nonprofits including Trout Unlimited and Walleyes Unlimited. These groups manage watercraft inspection stations, assist with AIS early detection surveys and assist with AIS outreach and education.

During 2025, staff inspected more than 120,000 watercraft. The inspections uncovered 38 mussel-fouled watercraft and 570 transporting aquatic weeds. Staff also identified more than 20,000 high-risk boats, which are boats that last launched in states with known AIS infestations; many of these were Montana residents that traveled out-of-state.

The Clearwater, Ravalli and Anaconda inspections stations saw the most traffic, collectively inspecting more than 35,000 watercraft. Data shows that the majority of out-of-state boats were from Idaho.

New for 2026, FWP will be contracting with the High Plains Conservation District for the first time to operate the Highway 12 watercraft inspection station outside of Helena and working with the Lincoln Conservation District to identify a new location the Eureka inspection stations.

"Montana is gearing up for another busy season for holding the line against invasive species," Woolf said.

Stations begin operation in early March, specifically targeting snowbird traffic from the lower Colorado River area. Inspections are available by appointment through the winter. To arrange an inspection, call 406-444-2440.
