SOURDOUGH

By "Swede" Troedsson

During the 1970s, Hank Greidl was heading up a Forest Service helicopter sagebrush spraying project in the Gravelly Mountains, located southwest of Ennis, Montana. A sheepherder's camp was also located in the vicinity of the sagebrush spray project camp.

Early one morning, much to the sheepherder's amazement, the sagebrush spraying project helicopter landed close to his camp! A project employee ran over to the sheepherder's camp holding a cup. The employee asked the sheepherder if he had any sourdough starter so that the spray project camp could use it to make sourdough hotcakes.

The sheepherder filled the employee's cup with sourdough starter. After thanking the sheepherder, the employee returned to the helicopter. The helicopter then departed and flew back to the project camp. Now the camp could enjoy sourdough hotcakes!
