LION LAKE

By "Swede" Troedsson

During the Fourth-of-July weekend in 1966, my wife Mary Ann and I backpacked into Grayling Lake for an overnight camping and fishing trip. (Grayling Lake is situated in the East Pioneer Mountains, approximately 15 miles WSW of Melrose, MT).

We camped near the lake inlet between scattered snowbanks. Numerous pika scurried and bleated near our campsite.

The next morning, following the Lion Lake outlet, we walked about 300 yards south from Grayling Lake to Lion Lake. It appeared that the ice had recently melted off Lion Lake.

On one of my casts of my fishing lure into Lion Lake, it got hung-up on the lake bottom. While gently tugging on the fishing line to free the lure, the tip of the fishing rod disconnected and SLID DOWN the fishing line down to the hung-up lure!

Realizing that my fishing was done without that rod tip, I decided to wade down to that hung-up lure to retrieve that rod tip!

Completely disrobed, and much to Mary Ann's amusement, I waded buck-naked through knee deep and extremely cold water, down to the hung lure and rod tip. I bent over and retrieved that rod tip and lure!

In spite of that effort, I did not catch any fish in Lion Lake!

Alan Weltzien Writers Series Hosts Authors Sally Cobau and Ben Kuntz

The University of Montana Western English Department is pleased to announce an upcoming reading and conversation with local authors Sally Cobau and Ben Kuntz on Thursday, March 26, from 7:00–8:30 p.m. in the Bulldog Lounge as part of the O. Alan Weltzien Writers Series.

The O. Alan Weltzien Writers Series is a literary event that brings authors, poets, and writers to campus for readings and discussions. Named after Weltzien, a longtime professor and writer, the series highlights both emerging and established authors, often with a focus on literature connected to Montana and the West.

This event will feature local authors Sally Cobau and Ben Kuntz.

Sally Cobau is a writer, teacher, mom, yoga practitioner, and hiker from Dillon, Montana. Originally from Ohio, she fell in love with Montana when she came here for graduate school in Missoula. After receiving her MFA in poetry from the University of Montana, her work has been published in Rattle, Hole in the Head Review, Oyster River Pages, The Sun, Room Magazine, Writing in a Woman's Voice, Ekphrastic Review, Poems Across the Big Sky II, and other journals and anthologies. In December of 2025, her debut poetry collection, Animals in the House: 18 Sonnets, was published. When she's not writing, she explores the mountains near her home. The ranchers, river guides, professors, and dog lovers in this little town form the heart of her work.

Ben Kuntz moved back to western Montana a few years ago after nearly twenty years in Bethel, Alaska, where he was an associate professor of English at the Kuskokwim branch of the University of Alaska Fairbanks. He holds a BA and MA from the University of Montana and an MFA from Eastern Washington University. In Dillon, he teaches occasionally at UM Western and works at the Patagonia Outlet. His stories and essays have appeared in small publications including Cirque and The Inlander.

This event is free and open to the public, and coffee and snacks will be available for purchase at The Cup. For more information, please contact Dr. Wright at laura.wright@umwestern.edu.

Access Pioneers

Securing hunting access in Montana is no easy feat. But it's hard to imagine just how much more difficult it would be if the Block Management Program didn't exist. From its formalization in 1996, the program has grown to include partnerships between Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks and 1,326 cooperators across the state.

"Many cooperators were in access agreements with FWP prior to the 1996 hunting season, but in the 1995 Legislative Session the agency was granted the authority to compensate for hunter impacts as the result of allowing public hunting access," said FWP Landowner Sportsmen Coordinator Jason Kool.

So on this 30th anniversary year, FWP is celebrating 315 landowners across the state who have been working with the agency for at least three decades, as well as many others who make the program successful.

"Ranching is just such an important part of the community and such an important part of the economy for Montana, and I cannot tell you how important you are to the hunting heritage. This is what makes Montana, Montana," Clark said.

In southeast Montana, more than 75 percent of the land is under private ownership, so Block Management is a vital tool for hunters to gain access and for landowners to manage impacts.

Womack's bunch - I noticed our ad for the Masonic Lodge in Wednesday's Dillonite Daily, and wish to thank you all for the wonderful support you have given us through the years. Start to Harvest

Weekly Good Food Network Garden Notes

Why Go Raised Beds?

Raised beds offer three distinct advantages for the Montana climate:

1. Earlier Thaw: Soil in raised beds warms up significantly faster than the frozen ground, allowing for earlier planting of cool-season crops.
2. Controlled Nutrition: SW Montana natural soil can vary from heavy clay to rocky alluvium. Raised beds allow you to curate a perfect mix of topsoil and compost.
3. Frost Protection: It is easier to attach "hoop" structures or frost blankets to the frames of raised beds, extending your harvest into the chilly nights of September.

Finding the Right Depth for Your Crop

Shallow Beds (6–8 inches) Ideal for quick-growing greens and small roots that don't need much room to roam.

- Best for Area: Lettuce, Spinach, Radishes, Arugula, Chives.

Medium Beds (12–18 inches) The "all-purpose" height. This depth accommodates most root vegetables and sturdy brassicas.

- Best for Area: Carrots, Beets, Onions, Kale, Broccoli, Peas, Beans.

Deep Beds (18–24+ inches) Necessary for heavy feeders and plants with expansive root systems or those requiring "hilling."

- Best for Area: Tomatoes, Potatoes, Squash, Pumpkins, Asparagus.

Not all vegetables are created equal when it comes to "leg room." Choosing the correct depth for your raised bed ensures healthy root development and better moisture retention.
