Montana Youth Challenge Academy and Montana National Guard Mourn Loss of Cadet

The Montana Youth Challenge Academy and the Montana National Guard are mourning the loss of a student on Tuesday, June 2, 2026.

The student was a cadet enrolled at the Montana Youth Challenge Academy in Dillon. An investigation is ongoing and no further details can be released at this time.

"As a father, my heart breaks for this young person's family and all who loved them," said Brig. Gen. Trent Gibson, Adjutant General of Montana. "After 26 years with the Montana Youth Challenge Academy, including serving as the former director, I know firsthand how much the staff care for every cadet who walks through the door. This is a close community bound together by a shared commitment to helping young people. This loss is felt throughout the academy and across the Montana National Guard family."

"Right now, we are focused on caring for the cadets, staff, and families in every way possible," said MYCA Director Melissa Robbins. "Our hearts are with the cadet's family, friends, and fellow peers. We are grateful for the kindness and outpouring of support from our local community."

Out of respect for the cadet, the family, and the academy community, we ask for privacy and compassion during this difficult time.

Attorney General Knudsen leads 14-state coalition against California's woke DEI requirements

Montana Attorney General Austin Knudsen led a coalition of 14-state attorneys general in asking the Supreme Court of the United States (SCOTUS) to reverse a Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals decision that violates physicians' First Amendment right. The decision compels physicians to adopt California's Continuing Medical Education's (CME) state-approved viewpoints, which push radical diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI).

The amicus brief was filed Tuesday in Azadeh Khatini, MD; Do No Harm, Inc. v. Randy Hawkins. As noted in the brief, SCOTUS should reverse the Ninth Circuit decision because California is infringing on medical professionals' free speech by limiting CME curriculum to state-approved DEI messaging. Physicians are required by each state to complete CME courses to maintain their licenses and remain in good standing, and California CME requires physicians to adopt state-approved DEI viewpoints as a condition of their licensing.

"If California's statute passes Constitutional muster, the prior limitations on the government-speech doctrine fall away, leaving only questions about just how far this power reaches," Attorney General Knudsen wrote in the brief.

The Ninth Circuit decision upholding California's CME requirement contradicts Chiles v. Salazar. In Chiles, courts must apply strict scrutiny when evaluating the regulation of the private speech of professionals. Although the case protected a mental health counselor's ability to discuss conversion therapy, it did not limit the counselor's ability to address the subject. In the same sense that the government cannot prohibit a professional from speaking on a viewpoint that is contrary to the government, the government should not compel the speaker to speak on the government's viewpoint. This new mandate not only restricts physicians' speech in training but could also expand state power by compelling government-mandated messaging in other professional fields.

Historically, California exercised little to no control over the curriculum of CME courses. Under California's recent mandate, however, CME instructors are to prepare and present a "curriculum that includes the understanding of implicit bias," including examples of how implicit bias affects physicians' and surgeons' treatment decisions and health outcomes. The training even goes as far as including strategies for recognizing and addressing bias in the health care field.

among patients of different races, ethnicities, gender identities, sexual orientations, age, and other demographics.

"Into this maelstrom of national debate over DEI, including implicit bias training, and other deeply controversial issues, California has thrust petitioners and anyone else who engages in CME instruction," the brief states. "In doing so, it has forced these private actors to serve as the mouthpiece of the California government, endorsing one viewpoint in the controversy while implicitly rejecting the other. And it has done so despite having other viable avenues for expressing California's position on implicit bias in medicine."

Attorneys general from Alabama, Alaska, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Kansas, Louisiana, Nebraska, Oklahoma, South Carolina, Texas, and West Virginia also joined the brief led by Montana and Iowa.

Attorney General Knudsen and Trump Administration win climate case

Montana Attorney General Austin Knudsen released the following statement today after the Ninth Circuit of Appeals affirmed the District Court of Montana's decision to dismiss Lighthiser v. Trump, a case he intervened in last year. "This is a huge win for Montana. My office was happy to step in and help the Trump Administration litigate this case. We couldn't have asked for a better outcome, as now two courts have proven that we were right all along — this case was nothing more than an attempt to stop President Trump's pro-energy policies and push a bad-for-Montana liberal climate agenda. The courts are not meant to advance political agendas, but uphold the law, which they did today."

Nonresident hunters can now check their Alternates List status online

Nonresident hunters who signed up for the Alternates List can now check their position on the list by logging into their MyFWP account.

The Alternates List gives nonresident hunters a second chance to obtain a combination license (big game, general elk or general deer). These licenses become available when other hunters return them, often due to medical issues or refund requests.

Here's how it works:

- After the sign-up period closed on June 1, the list was randomized.
- Each customer on the list was assigned a random number.
- As returned licenses become available, hunters at the top of the randomized list will be contacted first to finalize the purchase of the license, and so on until the returned nonresident combo licenses are filled.
- You will have five days to finalize your purchase. If you don't finalize within this time period, the license will go to the next in line.
- Hunters will be notified by email, so ensure your email address in your MyFWP account is current.

Returned licenses can come in at any time between now and Dec. 1, the final date for refunds. Because of this, the number of licenses available and your chances of receiving one can vary year to year.

To check your number or update your contact information, log into your MyFWP account. For more details on the Alternate's List, go to Alternates List webpage or call the FWP Licensing Call Center at 406-444-2950 Monday through Friday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Gallatin River reopened near Markley Bridge

An emergency closure on a portion of the Gallatin River near Big Sky has been lifted.

The closure has been enacted for human safety during certain phases of a U.S. Forest Service project to replace Markley Bridge starting in March.

The closure restricted boating on the Gallatin River from the Upper Deer Creek boat launch—just upstream of Markley Bridge—to the Portal Creek boat launch.

Future phases of the project may require the closure to be reinstated temporarily later this summer.

Veteran's Corner Update #567

By Mike Lawson

Many Veterans leave the military every year through retirement or at the end of the enlistment they signed up for. There is an organization called VETLIFE that helps these Veterans and their families discover and access the benefits they've earned. VETLIFE has a free app called BATTLE BUDDY. This app is available for free on the App Store or Google Play. Through this app the Veteran can move from confusion to action quickly in the following ways: *Benefits are accessed sooner *Financial stress is reduced *Health care engagement improves *Risk factors tied to isolation and instability decrease. It's worth checking out if your getting out of the service, or a family member or friend who is getting out. Access, not awareness, changes outcomes.

Recently we lost Army Captain Diane Carlson who was a combat nurse in Viet Nam (1968-69). She was a trailblazer in leading the hard-fought, decade-long effort to build the Vietnam Women's Memorial on the Mall in Washington, D.C.. This is the first-and still the only-memorial on the National Mall dedicated specifically to women's military service. Much more could be said about this true American hero from Montana. I personally have seen this Memorial and it is very sobering and impressive.

If you're a woman veteran and are pregnant, the VA has you covered from your first positive pregnancy test through delivery and postpartum care, including initial care for your newborn. You can call Women Veterans Call Center at 1-855-829-6635.

It's time to wind this up. School will soon be out and many activities for the kids will see them out and about on or near our streets. Drive carefully as we don't want any of them to get Until next time, take care.
