Beavers Rally Past Whitefish 5-3

Jeremy Crawford, Southwestern Montana News

The Beaverhead County Beavers battled back from an early deficit Thursday to earn a 5-3 victory over the Whitefish Bulldogs.

Whitefish struck first in the opening inning after Finn Ryan singled to drive in a run. The Bulldogs extended their lead in the third when Carter Godsey launched a home run to left field and Ryan added another RBI single to make it 3-0.

The Beavers answered in the bottom of the fourth inning when Levi Stonebraker blasted a two-run homer to left field, cutting the deficit to one run.

Beaverhead County tied the game in the fifth after Cohen Hartman doubled to center field to bring home the tying run.

The Beavers took control in the sixth inning when a Whitefish error allowed the go-ahead run to score. Garrett Tackett then added an insurance run with a sacrifice fly to give Beaverhead County a 5-3 lead.

Logan Fox earned the win on the mound for the Beavers, allowing five hits and three runs, two earned, over 6 1/3 innings while striking out five and walking four. Levi Stonebraker came in to collect the save.

Stonebraker led Beaverhead County offensively with two RBIs while going 2-for-3 at the plate. Hartman also collected two hits for the Beavers, who turned one double play defensively.

Finn Ryan paced Whitefish with two RBIs while going 2-for-3. The Bulldogs also turned one double play in the contest.

Talking turkey: FWP, NWTF, landowners partner for Montana's first mentored youth turkey hunt

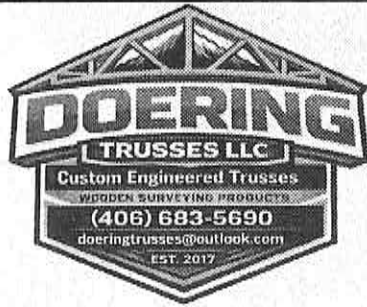

Springtime in Montana is a beauty like none other. The spring season also brings the distinct sound of gobbling turkeys. This year, FWP partnered with the National Wild Turkey Federation (NWTF) and several private landowners in the Flathead Valley to provide a special opportunity for young hunters.

Five youth hunters, ages 10 to 15, were selected through a drawing in late March to participate in a mentored turkey hunt on private lands in the Flathead Valley. Matthew Cowan, FWP's Region 1 education technician and president of the NW Montana Longbeards chapter of the NWTF, first proposed the idea in November 2025. The concept was met with enthusiasm, and Cowan quickly began laying the groundwork. Around 40 landowners across the valley were contacted by mail, email and phone. Ultimately, five agreed to participate and enrolled in a regional land access agreement with FWP. Block Management Areas (BMA) were also utilized over the weekend.

Volunteers from the NWTF chapters in Flathead Valley, Great Falls and Helena came together the first weekend of May to mentor the first-time turkey hunters. The weekend kicked off on Friday evening at the local gun range, where FWP staff and NWTF volunteers talked about the history of wild turkeys in Montana, private land etiquette, hunting regulations and general turkey hunting tips. Thanks to generous donations, each youth participant also received a new turkey hunting vest, calls, binoculars and other gear. The groups learned essential bear safety skills as well, including a hands-on bear spray demonstration. The evening wrapped up with shooting practice and pairing each youth with the NWTF volunteer who would mentor them through the weekend.

Saturday morning brought clear skies, gobbling birds and the kind of sunrise that makes the Flathead Valley unforgettable. By 6:15 a.m., the first text arrived: one of the young hunters had harvested a turkey. Throughout the day, more messages and photos followed. By that late afternoon, three youth hunters had taken four birds. That evening, everyone gathered at Cowan's home for dinner, stories from the field and a demonstration on how to process a wild turkey.

Although two of the youth hunters didn't harvest a bird over the weekend, both shared that they loved the experience and appreciated the mentorship provided by the NWTF volunteers. Cowan hopes this program will continue to grow and expand to other NWTF chapters across Montana and beyond. The weekend served as a powerful example of what's possible when FWP, nonprofit organizations and private landowners work together to provide meaningful access and shape the next generation of sportsmen and women.

Bozeman Artist Jack Schnepf Brings Live Painting to Symphony Finale

The Bozeman Symphony's season finale, Sounds of America III: Appalachian Spring, on June 13 and 14, will offer audiences more than a powerful musical experience. It will also feature the live creation of an original work of art by Bozeman multidisciplinary artist Jack Schnepf.

Throughout the concert weekend, Schnepf will create a large-scale abstract painting onstage as the orchestra performs, transforming the performances into a dynamic collaboration between music and visual art. The work will become part of his ongoing Entanglement Series, a collaborative body of work exploring the invisible connections among people, systems, ideas, and the natural world.

Audience members will watch Schnepf paint across three 3-by-4-foot panels during performances of John Adams' rhythmically charged The Chairman Dances and Roy Harris' monumental Symphony No. 3. During intermission, the artwork will move to the lobby, where patrons will be invited to write something they find beautiful about America.

The painting will then return to the stage as Schnepf continues refining it during Aaron Copland's beloved Appalachian Spring, a work that captures the optimism and resilience of early America. After the concert's triumphant finale, Pyotr Ilyich Tchaikovsky's exhilarating 1812 Overture, the work will be displayed in the lobby for audiences to view.

For Schnepf, the project is deeply personal. Describing himself as someone with "an internal love of art and music," he immersed himself in the concert repertoire in preparation for the performances, studying the emotional and expressive qualities of each piece. He also plans to attend orchestra rehearsals during the week leading up to the concert, incorporating elements from the musicians themselves, including items such as sheet music fragments or broken strings, directly into the artwork.

Schnepf first became interested in collaborating with the Symphony after attending its Carnival of the Nearly Extinct Animals concert last fall, which paired music with original artwork depicting endangered species. The experience resonated deeply with him, highlighting the powerful connection between science, music, and visual art while celebrating the beauty and fragility of the natural world.

"My goal is for the audience to experience our shared human connection through the art, as a reminder of our shared joy and hope,"

Schnepf said. Schnepf's work explores connection, empathy, and our capacity to understand ourselves and the world around us. His paintings range from purely abstract to representational, using animals, color, and mark-making as different ways into the same questions. His practice is grounded in optimism and the belief that art can help us experience what we hold in common.

His artistic practice began during recovery from a life-threatening illness and evolved into a sustained exploration of human experience and interconnectedness. As the first artist-in-residence at QCORE at Montana State University, Schnepf found inspiration in conversations surrounding quantum computing and human connection, ideas that ultimately gave rise to the Entanglement Series. His work has since been exhibited throughout the western United States and internationally, while his live painting performances continue to invite audiences into the creative process itself.

The collaboration promises to make Sounds of America III: Appalachian Spring not only a celebration of American music but also an immersive artistic experience that invites audiences to reflect on connection, creativity, and shared hope.

 MetraPark on June 27

Antlers, horns, hides, mounts and skulls that were confiscated by Montana Fish, Wildlife & Parks enforcement from all regions of the state will be auctioned on Saturday, June 27, at the Expo Center at MetraPark in Billings. National Auction will run the live auction.

Most of the items for sale come from poaching incidents. Montana statute requires FWP to sell seized items at public auction. This includes all birds, animals, fish, heads, hides, teeth or other parts of any animal other than a grizzly bear. When a carcass is confiscated, FWP donates the meat to a charitable organization and removes the antlers to be sold at auction. When enough inventory is collected, FWP schedules an auction. The last auction, held in 2023, raised over $82,000 for FWP's conservation and restoration programs.

Doors open at 8 a.m. for inspection and the live auction begins at 10 a.m. The auction is open to the public and free to attend. Participants can register to bid at the door with photo ID. The Expo Center at MetraPark is located at 308 6th Avenue North in Billings.
